

Guess What? by Iris Rostom

Today I saw a unicorn, striding through the town.
It looked so very funny, I mistook it for a clown.

Yesterday I saw a monkey, swinging in the park.
It caused so much trouble, all the dogs started to bark.

Last week I saw a dolphin, swimming in the pool.
He took part in the gala and won it for my school.

Last month I saw a kangaroo, playing a trombone.
She dropped it on her toe and gave the biggest moan.

On Friday I saw a hippopotamus, riding a rusty bike.
He stopped next to me and said, "I'll take you if you'd like".

Tomorrow I'm off to London, to the Ritz for tea.
I wonder what animal delights will be waiting there for me?
